

Presentation Layout for Enterprise Solutions

Overview

Knowledge Solutions based on Intellix technology have a clean separation of web layout and knowledge contents, among others driven by an architecture that separates web servers of a solution from application servers and the Knowledge Server running the solutions. This course describes various means of making the most of this architectural asset by providing the necessary knowledge and skills that will let web developers implement their own customised web views tailored to meet the needs of their company or customer. This is based on using the Presentation Service System and the way it separates the web layer and makes heavy use of XML based communication. It is underlined that this is not an XML or an XSLT course, basic knowledge hereof as well as development experience using XML and XML transforms is a precondition for taking this course.
